

Louisa Alcott Reader, The

Perhaps I shouldnt be if I had something new. But it is always the same, and there isnt any more surprise about it. I always find heaps of goodies in my stocking. Dont like some of them, and soon get tired of those I do like. We always have a great dinner, and I eat too much, and feel ill next day. Then there is a Christmas tree somewhere, with a doll on top, or a stupid old Santa Claus, and children dancing and screaming over bonbons and toys that break, and shiny things that are of no use. Really, mamma, Ive had so many Christmases all alike that I dont think I can bear another one. And Effie laid herself flat on the sofa, as if the mere idea was too much for her.
